Cardi B has never strayed away from being controversial. In fact, with her and Megan Thee Stallion's new song, "WAP" it seemed like no topic was off the table or too risqué for the rapper to talk about. But despite the persona that she gives off and the dirty lyrics that she's known for rapping, there are still two words that fans won't catch Cardi saying. Cardi B. | Dia Dipasupil/Getty Images Criticism of "WAP" "WAP" is definitely not for children or the faint of heart. The songs blunt lyrics received mixed reviews from the moment Cardi and Megan released it. CeeLo Green's comments about the song stirred up almost as much controversy as the song itself. "A lot of music today is very unfortunate and disappointing on a personal and moral level," he said in an interview with Far Out. "There was once a time when we were savvy enough to code certain things. We could express to those it was meant for with the style of language we used. But now music is shameless, it is sheer savagery." Green received so much backlash from Cardi and Megan stars that he soon retracted his statements. "Firstly, I am an advocate of artistic freedom and expression as well as a fan of Nicki, Cardi, and Meagan," he wrote on Instagram. "I know most of them personally and consider Cardi and Offset family," he continued. "Therefore, I would never disrespect them by any means. I acknowledge them as all powerful, beautiful, and influential women and professionals. RELATED: Cardi B Spent an Insane Amount of Money on COVID Testing While Filming the "WAP" Video "I wholeheartedly apologize to each of them for the inconvenience they have been caused due to a snippet of my interview being used as a headline, and in turn creating controversy and disconnect between me and these ladies as well as their fans." Cardi defends "WAP" People have complained about the lyrics of "WAP" and questioned how Cardi could rap about things like that as a mother. But despite all of the backlash, Cardi still stands by the song and its lyrics. "The people that the song bothers are usually conservatives or really religious people," she said in an interview on The Kyle and Jackie O Show. "But my thing is, I grew up listening to this type of music. Other people might think it's strange and vulgar, but to me, it's almost like really normal, you know what I'm saying?" "No, of course I don't want my child to listen to this song and everything," she continued. "It's for adults." What words will Cardi never rap? Though Cardi has made it clear that no sexual content is off the table, there are still two words fans will never hear her rapping. RELATED: Carole Baskin Has an Issue With Cardi B's "WAP" Video and It Has to Do With Animals "I hate the word moist," she said in the interview. "I hate the word horchata." She went on to say that while she loves the actual drink, the word "horchata" makes her cringe. "It's like a Mexican drink that's made out of like brown sugar or something. I don't even know what the hell they put on it but it's really good," she said. "I just hate that word." Surprisingly, Cardi also hates the word "gushy," which she raps repeatedly in the edited version of "WAP." "Abhhh I don't even like saying it!" she said of the word. "It was really hard for me to clean this song up because nobody could convince me to keep 'gushy' cause I hate the word 'gushy!' Courtney Whitmore of Pizzeria.com Here's a finger-lickin' fun idea for a baby shower theme. Courtney Whitmore, author, creative stylist and digital influencer at Pizzeria.com, and her friend Jenni Thigpen threw a B(A)B(Y)-Q party—a clever take on BBQ—for their expecting friend Ashley Seth. "We decided on a couple's shower since all of our husbands are great friends," Courtney tells CountryLiving.com. "We all love barbecue and we knew the guys would appreciate the food choices!" Who wouldn't? Advertisement - Continue Reading Below Since the parents-to-be are having a boy, blue and navy were natural color choices. "Minted had the perfect invitation, so we used it as a guide for styling the rest of the shower," Whitmore says. "One of my favorite tips for baby shower hostesses is to browse invitations as you try to decide on a theme or color scheme. You can often let the invitation be a great guide to styling and decorating!" From there, everything fell into place. "We let the BABY-Q theme inspire the food and decor, too," Whitmore explains. "Sunflowers were the perfect fit, and we hung cafe string lights in my dining room to mimic a backyard barbecue feel even though it's winter here in Nashville!" The happy blooms added a pretty pop of color to the party. "Food was an easy decision: barbecue!" Whitmore says. "We served up brisket, pulled pork, macaroni and cheese, baked beans, cole slaw, and chocolate chip cookies." A darling baby blue and white gingham cake was also on display and thoroughly enjoyed by all! Cute paper bags reinforced the theme and held disposable flatware for easy cleanup. Of course, a baby shower should be kid-friendly! The hostesses set out coloring books to keep little hands busy. Advice cards collected words of wisdom from fellow parents at the party. As for games? "We opted to just have the mom- and dad-to-be do the games so we let them duke it out as they were put to the test on swaddling, changing diapers, and finishing nursery rhymes!" Whitmore says. "Everyone had a great laugh, and for the record, mom-to-be won but dad-to-be was a superstar diaper-changer!" "My favorite part of the shower was certainly styling all the little details," Whitmore says. "I loved the cute favor idea to give out barbecue sauce to guests as they left the party! We decided on Jack Daniels since it's a Tennessee brand! Ashley and her husband absolutely adored all the sweet details including the garland of baby pictures of both her and her husband." This is a true story: A friend called me the other day and shared that he had just conducted a slew of interviews to fill an open position. A number of highly qualified candidates came forward, and he moved quickly on an offer that eventually was accepted. MORE ON GENERATIONAL DYNAMICS Management Techniques for Bringing Out the Best in Generation Y Employers Change Corporate HR Policies to Cater to Generation Y, Survey Finds Generation X: Stepping Up to the Leadership Plate Leadership and Generation X Leading IT with the Next Generation Two days later, he received a call from the mother of one of the other candidates wanting to know why her child didn't get the job. She couldn't imagine why my friend did not want to hire her highly talented, outgoing and qualified child. Welcome to the world of Gen Y. Now I am not saying that all of Gen Y-ers (or their parents) have this sense of entitlement, but there's no question that this group of young, intelligent and technology-savvy workers is going to put our managerial talent to the test. Just last week I was discussing this story with Russ Finney, VP of IS for Tokyo Electron U.S. Holdings, and he presented a different angle. Russ has hired a number of very talented Gen Y developers. They were getting a bit frustrated that they had to develop code within the parameters of the existing environment rather than being able to use the Web and create a solution that could be done in a few weeks and basically for free. Russ could have found a million reasons to say no; instead he set up an isolated server that would allow his developers to get what they need, producing results that serve the business while preserving the integrity of the overall environment. This enabled them to move faster and also fosters a culture that is hopefully blending the best of both worlds. These two examples are just the tip of the iceberg of what we'll experience as this new workforce of "digital natives" meshes with the existing workforce of "digital immigrants." I am sure that each has lots to learn from the other. For some great advice on the topic, check out our special report. Have you got a Gen Y story to tell? I would enjoy hearing how you are making things work within your organization. Please send me an e-mail to share your experiences. Less than a week to go until London Dentistry Show.
